

IATF Speaker Fellowship: Information and Biographies

The IATF Speakers Fellowship prepares next generation changemakers from Arab society in Israel for meaningful connections with American Jewish communities. It provides American Jewish organizations with a network of speakers and thought partners while offering Arab/Palestinian citizens opportunities to share their stories and strengthen their skills. This unique program responds to growing desires within the American Jewish community for authentic connections with a diverse cross-section of Israelis and creates concrete entry points to some of the most dynamic and important priorities for Israeli society today.

Over the course of the fellowship, IATF Speaker Fellows complete public narrative storytelling training, learn about the American Jewish community, and continue developing their vision as changemakers. Educational programs with IATF Speaker Fellows are designed to foster honest exchange, mutual learning, and meaningful engagement for groups with any level of familiarity with Arab society in Israel.

The inaugural cohort of the IATF Speaker Fellowship consists of seven Arab/Palestinian citizens of Israel, each of whom are changemakers in different ways. The cohort spans diverse professional and social change activities including civil society, journalism, higher education, leadership, economic development, arts and culture, high-tech, and more. You can see their full biographies below.

Fellows' stories and life experiences serve as centerpieces for discussions that can cover the following topics: Daily realities and complex identities of Arab citizens of Israel; Efforts to build a shared society in Israel and increase socioeconomic mobility for Arab citizens; Experiences and discourse in Arab society pertaining to October 7, the ongoing war, and other major current events.

Fellows share their personal perspectives and experiences; they are not representatives of their employers or IATF. While many of the Fellows can offer insights into Arab citizens' experience of the ongoing war, they are not geopolitical or security experts. Programs will focus on Arab citizens and Jewish-Arab relations within Israel, and the impact of ongoing events on these topics.

U.S Speaking and Learning Tour: May 28-June 8, 2024

The U.S Tour will give American Jewish communities and leadership opportunities to hear firsthand perspectives from Arab/Palestinian citizens about their daily realities, experiences following October 7, and work to build a better future. We are also facilitating learning for Fellows about the American Jewish community, its relationship with Israel, and its relevance to their work.

Possible formats for programs include:

- A traditional speaker panel with 3-4 Fellows and audience Q&A.

- Interactive discussion with all seven Fellows participating in roundtable discussions with learners. This can also include an initial presentation or an activity to spark discussion.
- Meetings with smaller groups of American Jewish leaders and professionals for learning and discussion with the Fellows.
- Professional training programs where Fellows and IATF staff share insights and best practices for working with Arab society during Israel education experiences.

Programs in the Speaking Tour will involve a modest honorarium. IATF is covering travel costs.

Ongoing Speaking and Learning Opportunities

The IATF Speaker Fellows are part of a speakers bureau, ready to share their stories in American Jewish contexts. IATF staff will connect you with the Fellow(s) that may be the best fit for your group and interests and offer support in prepping for and framing your program.

Possible programs with the IATF Speakers Bureau include:

- Zoom programs: traditional presentations, interactive discussions, or a combination.
- Lectures or interactive discussions in Israel.
- Site visits and tours with a Fellow(s) in Israel at their workplace or within their community.
- In-person speaker tours, conference sessions, events, and workshops in the U.S.
- Professional development and training for American Jewish and Israel education organizations arranged with IATF staff and Fellows (virtual or in-person).

Please reach out to Miranda Hellmold Stone, IATF Programs and Operations and Associate, to explore possibilities: MirandaHE@jdc.org

Programs with the Speakers Bureau will include a modest honorarium. Organizations will generally be responsible for covering travel and lodging expenses associated with programs.

About IATF

IATF is a professional resource center on Arab citizens of Israel that promotes American Jewish discourse and engagement that is informed by the complex realities and current developments on the ground. Through programs and partnerships with American Jewish leaders, funders, educators, and organizations, IATF supports nuanced and contextualized discourse, impactful philanthropy, and stronger and more robust engagement with Israel.

IATF was created in 2006 by a coalition of major American Jewish organizations and philanthropies* as a non-partisan educational resource to convene and raise-awareness among North American Jewish communities about Arab citizens of Israel. A membership organization, IATF quickly grew into a coalition of more than 100 organizations committed to making Arab citizens, one-fifth of Israel's population, a mainstream concern of the North American Jewish community.
