

The World Jewish Action Committee of the JCA invites you to attend this extraordinary lecture and discussion with Dr. Dalia Fadila on Tuesday, February 24, 2015, 7 pm, at the Jewish Community of Amherst, on the topic

"A Complex Identity: Arab Women in Israeli Society"

Dr. Dalia Fadila is president of Al Qasemi Engineering and Science College, an Arab college of education in the Haifa area, Israel.

She has served in the past 8 years as provost of the college and acted as president of the college during 2006.

She is a fellow member of the "EU Leadership Program," and the "USA International Leadership Program".

Dr. Fadila is an expert on organizational development, educational entrepreneurship, and a researcher of American literature, women's literature and ethnic studies. She has led and managed national and international seminars and projects on issues of gender, culture, identity and education.

Of deep concern to her, are promoting quality education for underprivileged students in general and Arab students in Israel, in particular, through establishing an alternative schooling system, and empowering women as educators, entrepreneurs and leaders.

She has established private schools for teaching English called Q Schools - English Language and HR Development that propose a unique approach to learning/teaching English as space for intellectual and personal empowerment; the approach is particularly suited to underprivileged students and stems from the need of these students to develop personally and professionally.

Dr. Fadila is currently also a faculty member of the International School for Leadership and Diplomacy at IDC-Inter Disciplinary Center in Hertzlya, Israel, a member of the governmental civil-service higher committee, and a Fellow of the Taub Center for Social Policy Research in Israel and other national and international forums dealing with education and the Arab minority in Israel.
